Career

After the two-years' forensic training to be admitted to the bar, and some experiences as teacher in professional training courses organised by the Puglia Region, I moved to Milano in 1998 where I worked at Giuseppe Iannaccone law firm as lawyer specialised in civil and commercial law.

In early 2001 I started my collaboration with Cocuzza e Associati Law Firm based in Milano, where I still work as Senior Associate.

I mainly practice in the area of commercial law and property law, assisting leading Italian and international groups operating in the retail sector. I also assist companies in Mergers & Acquisitions deals, both in corporate and environment law matters.

Furthermore, I'm the manager of the Firm responsible for dealing with all suppliers, for the security and maintenance of the workplace, and for the organization of events, meetings and workshops. I represent the Firm in an international association of independent law firms whose name is Pangea.

I'm interested in meditation and psychology. I practice yoga and other techniques aimed to personal empowerment.

I write - and fluently speak - both French and English and I'm learning Spanish by myself

As lawyer I have the qualities and skills requested to manage relations with current and prospect corporate partners of PWN. In particular I think I could offer PWN my long experience in negotiating contracts and agreements, in participating and managing work teams and more in general in dealing with people.
