

Candidate for membership Experience Co-director

Simona Gargani

Simona is a Chemistry graduate in Italy who studied with European grants in the UK and Spain.

She worked in technical, marketing and management positions in France and the UK for large Corporations such as Millipore, Perkin Elmer and The BOC group.

Chartered marketer, she taught International Marketing Strategy at Cambridge Marketing College for post-graduate Diploma students.

Back in her hometown of Milano, she is now responsible for sales in the Middle East and Africa for Eni Versalis.

She is passionate about sharing work and cultural experiences to foster personal growth.

She believes that where talented women are valued we can find the most successful Companies.

Simona would like to join PWN with a more active role in order to give her contribution to the Milan association and to help in developing a society uninfluenced by gender and based on attitude, competences and the ability to deliver results.